They're back! If you've read Gilbertson's delightful Moon Over Madeline Island, you've been wondering what happened next to Eve and Ruby, that indefatigable, indomitable duo.

At Moon's end, they'd settled in on Madeline Island (in Wisconsin's Lake Superior), and, with a few new friends, created a cottage industry making chichi aprons.

After offering a couple of delicious scenes where Eve turns down first Martha's, then Target's, pleas to merchandise their wares, Gilbertson gets to the fresh juicy stuff.

Eve has found Helen, the daughter she was forced at 17 to give up for adoption. Will Eve answer her letter? Then, shocking news about Eve's own family, Ruby's deceased husband, the mysterious cabin in back of the lodge, and...they all decide to stop smoking. Well, knowing Ruby and Eve, and Sam and Lillie, that last is not much of a cliffhanger.

The whole crew—including Johnny and Howard, the to-die-for couple next door—joins in for another fine read.
